

The Roman soldier by Daniel

Quintus was a Roman soldier he was the best Roman soldier everybody said so even the centurion.

In one battle he was fighting the ten best Celt fighters, but that he was outnumbered by the Celts best fighters he lost and became a prisoner of war. When the Celts got back to the village they took all of his armor and weapons leaving him with his tunic. They threw him in a cell it was all wet and bones everywhere. Years past one night he woke up but the village was silent then he heard voices but it was talking Latin not British then he saw Celt bones on the floor then he realized what happened the Romans had come to rescue him "guys overhear" shouted Quintus the Romans ran over

"There you are" said the centurion

"Sir I found the keys" said Quintus's best friend Maximus

"Good open the cell then

"Said the centurion

"Here are your weapons and armor

"said a soldier

"Thanks said Quintus. "Right let's get back to camp"

Said the centurion. On the way back someone gave Quintus a piece of bread

"thanks" said Quintus. Back at the camp the centurion told Quintus that they were going to attack Caractacus. That day they were going to attack Caractacus but to their surprise Caractacus was waiting for them

"Charge" said Caractacus

"Charge" said the centurion, the battle had begun. In the battle Quintus was fighting he heard screams he saw bones, then he saw the centurion and Caractacus about to stab him so Quintus ran towards Caractacus, Caractacus saw him and moved towards Quintus. Their swords clashed you could see the sparks when iron hits iron. Caractacus pushed Quintus's shield out of his hand and bashed his sword out of his hand as well. Caractacus was about to stab him but a Roman soldier has a spear, sword and dagger so Quintus grabbed his dagger and stabbed Caractacus. Hours past and the battle ended and Rome won. Suddenly the Roman war god Mars came down and said

"Join the gods and become a god yourself join me"

"Ok" said Quintus and that's where he lived in heaven and he let his friend come along and Oso did the centurion.

The End
