

Dear diary!

Lucy

Wow! What a great day it has been. BANG! BANG! Me and the other underworld gods woke up a few days ago very annoyed, there was a very peculiar sound up on earth. Then I realized who was making that sound. It was the extremely irritating one hunapu and seven hunapu a few days later we were getting really irritated so we decided to invite the twins for a tea party. But little did they know me and the other underworld gods planned a little surprise for them. A few days passed and we finely found a time they weren't busy and they came down this morning so we challenged them to three tests the first one they passed as they crossed the river, the next one they didn't pass the greeted the wooden carving of one of the Lords of death not the real Lord of Death and the next test they failed again as they sat on the fiery bench what fools well I guess I'm just a great trickster. Well done me! Now me and the lads can sleep in peace!