

Dear diary,

When I woke up this morning I was greeted by a very unpleasant noise it was One Hunapu and seven Hunapu. I decided to summon them to the underworld 'boy's you have disturbed the lords of death' I said 'if you pass you can survive if not you die' they passed the first test but... failed the second. Well at least there's no more noise.

To be continued...

To my utmost horror it was not the end of the noise some one got pregnant and were in the same family and they are even better than there parents and they are also very loud . once again I chose to summon them to the underworld like I did to their uncle and father 'you have disturbed the lords of death now you must pass 4 tests if you pass you can live if not you die' I got quite tired from saying it for a second time but it had to be done. first you will have to jump over the river of blood and spikes, they passed. next they will have to resist the temptation from siting on the burning chair there father and uncle previously burned themselves on they passed that to. next they had to try and beat the us to a game of ball we tried to fool them with a spike ball but we promised to play fair and they beat us at that as well 'What should we do to try and fool them?' ...

finally a good Idea we should put them in an oven and burn them. Lets. So we built an oven and, and ,and... we did it so we went down to the river and threw there ashes into the river but like last time they came back and they possessed some of our powers and well killed another lord of death and refused to bring him back so we just gave up on trying to kill them but they did turn themselves into the earth and the sun and they brung one Hunapu back and turned him into the corn God.