

Wow, what a surprising and peculiar day it has been. The gods invited us to the underworlds and of course we went them being the Lords of Death and all we knew if we didn't they would end are lies the minute we said no. They said they had invited us there because we were too loud and so they set us on some tests. That's not it though because we knew of these test from are dad who died to these tests and we remember the tricks. First they those stupid Gods asked us to do the exact same test dad told us about we had to separate the real God from the fake. Hunapu had a great idea we got some mosquitos and they went straight to the real gods. Then they told us to sit on a bench but as I got closer I began to feel hotter and hotter then I saw smoke rise up from the bench. Then I remembered the bench of fire are father told us about it seemed to just be a normal bench but it was actually on fire I pulled Hunapu away who was about to sit on the fiery bench. At first he was surprised but I explained to him.

It was the next day and the Gods challenged us to a game of ball we were very surprised because everyone knew we are the best at ball in the world. As we neared closer we saw huge metal spikes on it. We said we would not play if they did not play fair. We will see what they do tomorrow in are final test.