The Temple of the Warriors

Stone engravings at Chichen Itza.

"When I first walked in to the site through Mayaland's private entrance it surprised me how although you were moments from a hotel, it seems like worlds away. It's mind boggling to think that an ancient civilisation was able to pull off the engineering required for such an impressive structure. I could stare at it for hours – in fact I think I did."

Chichen Itza

The mysterious Mayan temple

Who wouldn't want to visit?

Destination of Chichen Itza

Chichen Itza is a designated World Heritage site. Thousands of years ago, people known as the Mayans built this temple. They lived in Central America and built Chichen Itza in Mexico. In the city of Yucatan. This phenomenal pyramid is located only 90 miles east-northeast from the city, Uxmal. It is also 75 miles east-southeast from the modern city of Merida! So you could relax in a hotel in one of those cities, then you could explore the wonders of Chichen Itza!

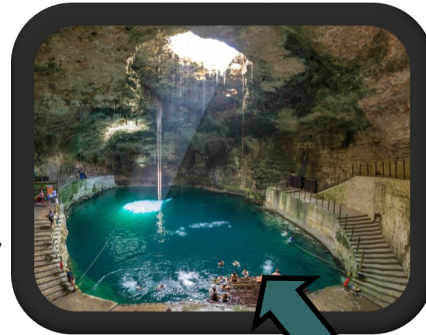

You could be here!

Highlights of Chichen Itza

If you decide to come to the Mayan temple, you may want to book a holiday between November and April because the weather is milder and better for exploring the pyramids, thereby avoiding the rainy seasons and cold months.

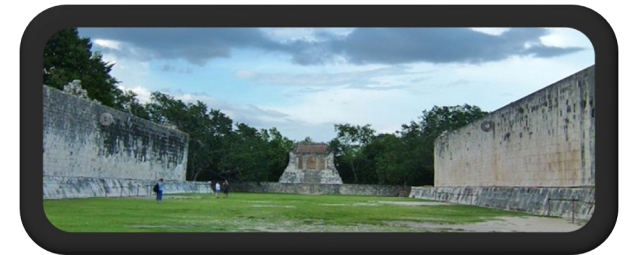

At the breathtaking temple, you can take a look at the spectacular Cenote Sagrado, a large sinkhole that was found. It measures 60 meters in diameter and treasures have been found down there! Bracelets, necklaces, rings, jade objects and believe it or not, Gold was thrown in! Back then, Mayans used to do sacrifices to their Gods, so they also threw the bones of young woman down the sinkhole as an offering to Chaac, the Rain God. If you book it, you can actually go swimming in it!

This could be you!

Mayans used to play a ball game, and if you go to Chichen Itza, you could focus your eyes on the worlds biggest Mayan Ball court! It is measured over 160 meters long and 70 meters wide! Mayan men also played a game called Pok Ta Pok here. Anthropologists believe that the object of the game was to hurl a ball through a ring that was placed on a wall, seven metres above the ground. Each team had six field players, who would attempt to pass the ball using any body part except their hands. They had to hit it to their captain who would then attempt the shot using a racket of sorts.

Maybe you could have a game!
