

SHAVING FOAM FUN!

On the 16th of February, also known as Shrove Tuesday, Issy, Mum and I created some marbled art. Probably not the way you would think though. In the morning, Mum and I took a visit to Sainsbury's to get what we needed. Surprisingly, we needed to fetch shaving foam and some food colouring, we had all of the other equipment at home. This was going to be a bit peculiar .

At around half past 1, we sat down on the lounge floor beside a soon to be messy mat, as this was going to go all over the place! As well as the shaving foam and food colouring, we also needed a baking tray, plate, paper, a spoon and a piece of strong cardboard. One for each of us. Before I started my artwork, I had to film Mum as this was going to be uploaded on to the school website for Classes 1 and 2.

The first video was just her telling the children what they needed. Next, she took the can of shaving foam and sprayed it all over her baking tray; I couldn't stop laughing as the sound of the foam squirting out of the can was hilarious!!!! In the background of that video, you could hear Issy and I giggling. Mum must of put a tad too much shaving foam on her baking tray as when I was filming her flattening it down with the cardboard, it almost toppled off the tray! After that, it was time to use the food colouring, now this bit was my favourite. Mum filled the little lid with the food colouring and dripped it over the shaving foam, using many colours to make it brighter. To make it a marbled piece of art, she mixed the colours up with the end of the teaspoon. I enjoyed filming, it was as if I was the...

Cameraman Extraordinaire!

Whilst I was filming, Issy was starting her artwork, so I started mine after one more video for Mum. This video showed how you create the marbled paper. It was quite simple, Mum just had to place the piece of blank paper on the shaving foam and push down on it, leave it for 3 seconds and peel it off. Then she scraped the shaving foam off the paper using the cardboard used earlier and then she had it. As much as I enjoyed filming, now it was my turn to do the art.

In the end, each of us did two marbled art pictures, they looked remarkable and stunning.

Not only did we have a lot of fun that day doing art, it was also Shrove Tuesday which meant we had pancakes for dessert. I had my favourite, sugar and lemon rolled up like a wrap and cut into smaller rolls.

MMMM it is making me hungry just thinking about them!
