

Dear Diary,

What an amazing day it's been.

Yesterday was a nice sunny day with the occasional gust of wind here and there. It just so happened that on that day we had planned on going to the beach.

Once we had arrived the tide was out which at the time would make perfect sand to build a giant sand castle realm. I got out of the car, grabbed a bucket and a spade and started to dig up the dry but moist. I started to ~~make~~ make an outer wall and then build the houses before finally making the big castle.

After we had build the bases of that realm we started to make the bases of another realm which we decided would be the ~~strong~~ enemy ~~realm~~.

I was ~~the~~ just digging up the last spade full of sand I hit some thing at first I thought it was just a rock but as I started to dig around it I ended up going about 20 yards from the sand castle realm and Alice. At one point of digging around I thought it may be a treasure chest but eventually after a long time of nagging my parents saying 'one more minute please' I discovered that it was the bones of a dinosaur, ~~it~~ was buried. Lots of people came to see it and even a couple scientists came to see the discovery.

I am so excited and I can't ~~wait~~ wait for tomorrow I wonder what will happen.